Birthday Traditions

around the world

South Korea 🇰🇷

Parents in South Korea sometimes try to guess a child's future on his or her first birthday. They put the child in front of some objects, such as a book and a coin. They wait to see which object the child takes. For example, a book means the child is going to be a teacher. A coin means the child is going to have a lot of money.

Nigeria 🇳🇮

In Nigeria, the first, fifth, tenth, and fifteenth birthdays are very special. To celebrate these birthdays, people have big parties and invite up to 100 people. They eat "jollof rice." This is rice with tomatoes, red peppers, onions, and cassava, a kind of potato.

Japan 🇯🇵

The third, fifth, and seventh birthdays are very important in Japan. Every year on November 15th, children of these ages celebrate the Shichi-go-san (Seven-five-three) Festival. They usually wear traditional clothes and eat "thousand-year candy" for a long life.

Ecuador 🇪🇨

In Ecuador, a family has a big party when a girl turns 15 years old. The birthday girl wears a dress, and her father puts her first pair of high-heeled shoes on her. Then he dances with her. Fourteen other girls dance with fourteen other boys at the same time.
